■ Federation of Archaeological Managers & Employers

FAME ...

"FAME is the only voice representing the concerns and interests of archaeological managers and employers. This community of interest helps members share their experience of the market in a non-competitive environment."

David Jennings, Chief Executive, York Archaeological Trust

"FAME membership provides us with the opportunity to engage in strategic dialogue with national agencies."

Tim Malim, Technical Director, SLR Consulting Ltd

"FAME membership allows us to keep in touch with other employers across the UK, and we find its health and safety services very helpful."

Ken Murphy, Director, Dyfed Archaeological Trust

"The commercial companies have a particular set of issues, and FAME provides us with the forum to discuss them."

Tim Holden, Managing Director, Headland Archaeology

"FAME provides a unique opportunity to engage with managers and employers of other archaeological companies working in all jurisdictions in the UK and Ireland. It is the only forum which provides advice, support and information relevant to effectively running an archaeological business. For commercial organisations, membership should be viewed as essential."

Colm Moloney, Managing Director,
Rubicon Heritage Services Ltd
